"This topical book begins with an appeal to teachers to remain positive in spite of what's happening outside the classroom and provides ideas to build confidence in addressing students' troubles. It offers valuable insights into dealing with challenges, from children's worries about the world to the parental tendency to overprotect to teachers' need to "recharge" in the midst of a stressful day. Practical and accessible, the book suggests simple ways of guiding honest and responsible children. As well as liberating activities that encourage students to disengage from their fears. It addresses children's heavy exposure to violence and stereotypes, especially through the media. It shows teachers how to explore major issues in the classroom with students in a healthy, positive way, and how to encourage stronger, more aware, independent, and successful learners."--Publisher.

Chris Roscoe, son of a policeman, was a corpsman in the Army. After his tour of duty in Vietnam, he went to college to pursue a nursing degree so he could continue to help the sick and injured. Along the way he met Alexandra Walton, a beautiful rich girl. They were classmates and friendly acquaintances, but after the class was over, they went their separate ways...until years later when Alex was injured in an accident and admitted to the hospital where Chris worked. They rekindled the friendship; only this time they fell in love. After marriage and a beautiful daughter, Chris discovered that he didn't know his wife. Alex had a hidden past, one that she was ashamed of but that didn't stop her from turning to it when her life wasn't going well, in her opinion, anyway. She wanted more, and what she wanted, he couldn't give her. Alex's story is one shared by many. Her struggle with substance abuse affected her marriage...and her life.
